About Val de Vie Estate

Martin Venter, Founder and CEO of Val de Vie Estate

While flying over the Paarl-Franschhoek valley in 2001, Martin Venter, Founder and CEO of Val de Vie Estate, discovered the perfect spot along the Berg River for his family's residence. Observing a neglected wine farm, originally established by Abraham Andries le Roux in 1783, Venter recognised its potential and felt compelled to revive it.

Val de Vie Estate was built on the principle of safety, with meticulous planning by architects and engineers to ensure the wellbeing of its residents. Cutting-edge technology and round-the-clock response teams guarantee a sense of security, allowing residents to live the life they've always desired, with complete peace of mind. Nature is an integral part of life at Val de Vie Estate and enriches the experiences of our residents. Here, families bond, friendships are forged and cherished memories are created—defining quality time for the community.

Homes at Val de Vie Estate are strategically positioned near waterways and adjacent to parks. They offer captivating views of vineyards and paddocks where polo ponies graze, eagerly anticipating their spirited matches of skill and speed. No longer is there a need to venture far for a better view or recreational activities; everything one could desire is conveniently located within the Estate itself.
